THE DAILY NEWS. to the maintenance of the constitution as the Her people will yield a ready and patriotic obedience to all laws of Congress constitutionally enacted. But of equal and incalculable importance is the inviolability of the reserved rights of the States. Of these the right of every State to regulate its own domestic and internal affairs has never been, until recently, questioned. The enjoyment of such a right is directly essential to the integrity, if not the very existence of the State Government. In the language of one of the messages of our earlier Presidents, 'My experience in public concerns, and the observations of a life somewhat advanced, confirmed the opinion long since imbibed by me, that the destruction of our State Governments, or the annihilation of their control over the local concerns of the people, would lead directly to revolution and anarchy, and finally to despotism and military domination. In proportion, therefore, as the General Government encroaches upon the rights of the States, in the same proportion does it impair its own power and detract from its ability to fulfil the purposes of its creation.' I will not believe that any such usurpation will be ever attempted upon the rights of Kentucky. But I should be false to the spirit of her people in their past and present devotion to the Constitution and Union of these States, if I did not solemnly avow that no such usurpation can ever be made with impunity."

TUESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 8, 1868

For Prendent .......... HORATIO SEYMOUR For Vice-President .... FRANCIS P. BLAIR.

To the People of South Carolina:

It was referred to the State Central Execu tive Committee, by the late Democratic Convention, to inquire into the disabilities imposed, by reason of the war, upon a portion of our people, restraining them from the exercise of the elective franchise in South Carolina and to publish the conclusion attained, for the information of the people of the State. The to state: 1. That no such disabilities now exist by or under the acts of Congress, known as the Reconstruction act, the State having been of-committee in discharge of that duty, announce that they have examined the subject, and beg ficially declared to be in the Union. 2. That no such disabilities exist under the so-called amendment, known as the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the disabilities therein expressed having reference to office-holding, and not to

8. That no such disabilities exist by the so called State Constitution of 1868, under which it is claimed that the State has been reconstructed and restored to the Union.

. The undersigned, therefore, announce that no such disabilities exist by force of any law, or supposed law, or authority whatever; and they urge their hitherto disfranchised fellowcitizens, in every part of the State, to exercise their right to vote at the coming election for President and Vice-President, of which right they have been so long deprived by military power. By order of the EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The Rosecrans Mission.

The letter of General Rosechans and the reply signed by General LEE, General BEAU-REGARD, the Hon. A. H. STEPHENS, ex-Governor PICKENS, Ex-Governor LETCHER, and other distinguished Southern gentlemen, contain nothing of striking or of new. It was natural that General ROSECEANS should feel that consolidation, semi-anarchy and a gigantic national debt were ruining the nation; and it was equally natural that he should desire to know whether the people of the South were willing to "pro-"tect, educate and elevate the poor freed- mission will go far to convince the people chivalrous devotion of old to restoring the peace and presperity of our common country. But it was impossible that this veteran soldier should state his views more definitely and eloquently than they have been stated by that grand convention which represented North and South, East and West: and it was impossible that the noble gentlemen, who joined in the response, could say more than has been said during four years by ten millions of people. Venerating, as we do, the names of LEE and BEAUREGARD, we were at first inclined to doubt the necessity of again declaring that slavery and secession are dead; that it is to the interest of the whites to extend to the negroes care and protection; that there. is no hostility towards the negroes in the South, and that our great want is peace. Had the Southern people been without a voice,-had they been so gagged that no public journal could speak in their behalf, and that no public meeting could be held, at which they might announce their wishes and set purposes,-had their tones been so muffled and choked that they could not be heard beyond the confines of their own towns and villages-then it would have been most certainly just and meet that one more public declaration should be made of their hopes and their desires.

But the South had spoken and had been heard. In the halls of her Legislatures, more than three years ago, slavery was abolished forever and the ordinances of secession were repealed; in the National Democratic Convention, held in July, the same principles were affirmed in the presence and with the approval of delegates and representative men from every State in the Union. The South could not have been more emphatic than she has been upon the two great issues of the war-secession and slavery.

Nor has the South been less explicit and outspoken in regard to the colored people. By law they were our slaves; by law we made them free; without law it was sought to make them our masters. To them was given the political power which was denied to us, and, instigated by designing knaves, they were insolent in manner, overbearing in conduct, and unmindful of their every obligation. Yet the South did not turn upon and rend them. It treated the negroes as it would have treated wayward children. The Southern people bore with the infirmities of their former slaves, looked with a merciful eye upon their errors, and were not provoked by idleness, insolence, or even and merciful eye upon their errors, and were all the defaulters will be dealt with as the ordinance directs.

kindly feeling. Our people knew that it was to the interest of the freedmen to be interest of the whites to educate and improve the freedmen. They have acted upon their knowledge, and have established, by their own conduct, the important fact that the South has been, is, and will be, the only bold and straightforward, upon the subject of the present and future relations of the white and colored races, they have also been candid and sincere in their cry for a lasting peace. When the Southern soldiers laid down their arms, they swore to support the Constitution of the United States. They did this without evasion or mental reservation. They had fought and had been conquered. They accepted the terms of surrender and have abided by them. They did not, however, give up their every right as freemen and white citizens. In their paroles they were promised protection under the laws, and when they had renewed their oath of allegiance, when they had complied with all the conditions which were imposed upon them, they believed themselves to be entitled to all their immunities and privileges under the Union and constitution. They sheathed their swords that peace might ceme; they destroyed, with their own hands, chattels to the value of three hundred million of dollars that peace might come. This was not all. When Congress, with the banner of revolution waving over its head, pressed forward to destroy the liberties of the whole country;when it deprived of his birthright every prominent man of honor in the South:when it ruled us by the sword, imprisoned our chieftains, deposed our judges, annulled our laws and insulted our womenthe Southern people suffered in silence, still praying for peace. They did not look for peace by the instrumentality of ignorant negroes and vicious white vagabonds; they did not look for peace by a destruction of the constitution; they did not look for peace by the acts of a usurping and corrupt national legislature. They demanded peace as they demand it now, that they might rebuild their ruined cities, make bright their waters with the sails of commerce, hear once more the hum of trade in crowded streets. For peace the South, now and ever, will give up all save honor.

But the North would not be satisfied, and now to the declarations of the Southern people-by their own voice, by the public press, by three years of magnanimous forbearance-that they will employ and protect the freedmen, that they only ask for a restoration of their rights under the constitution, and that, when the right of selfgovernment is given to them, they will be devotedly loyal to the constitution of their country, and fulfil every duty incumbent on peaceful citizens, are added the words of such men as BEAUREGARD and LEE. The rank and file of the South had already spoken; now their leaders, led by the man upon whose truth and integrity the North has cast no stain, speak out to vindicate and explain the purposes of themselves and of their people. If the North has not believed the words of the millions of men, it may still believe the words of those whom it has regarded as our master-minds and our advisers. The name of LEE will have its wonted effect, and although we are opposed to talking too often and saying too much, we still believe that, under the circumstances, the now famous Rosecrans men," and to apply themselves with the of the North and West that they have been frightened by a bugbear, and that the South is the friend of the freedman, the friend of peace, and, although the foe of Radicalism, a steady supporter of the Union under the

CITT HALL, MAYOR'S OFFICE.
CHARLESTON, S. C., August 18, 1868.
Believing it the sincere desire of every individual in this community to assist in preserving the public peace, and maintaining the dignity of the laws; feeling, in the political excitement now pervading all classes of our people, that through a single act of violence. either by accident or otherwise, we may be overwhelmed in a deplorab e breach of law and order-I, GEORGE W. CLARK, Mayor of the city aforesaid, do call upon all good citizens to abstain as far as possible from all public demonstrations of a noisy or riotous nature. Let each one regard himduct of all. Let no one, in the exercise of liberty do that against the law which will by law deprive him of his liberty. The public peace must and shall be preserved.

Given under my hand, and the seal of the city [L. S.] the date and year above mentioned. GEORGE W. CLARK, Mayor.
